Three living spaces, one home and plenty of Andalusia There are properties where having extra space simply means having more square metres. And then there are homes where that extra space creates possibilities. This property in Arenas clearly belongs to the second category. A main house and two separate apartments create three independently usable living areas, connected by terraces, a saltwater pool and far-reaching views across the mountains of the Axarquía all the way to the Mediterranean. The main house is bright, open and pleasantly uncomplicated. The living and dining areas flow directly into the open-plan kitchen, creating a space where everyday life simply happens naturally. This area has two...(Ask for More Details!)
